Somehow drawing buildings seems a formidable task and students are nervous about tackling that. This workshop is designed to teach you to draw relationships rather than precise renderings using the laws of perspective. It is a one day workshop that should help you build confidence and should open up a whole new world of subject matter. The optional second day will take the workshop outside to draw buildings in real life. After teaching this last year, I decided to offer this opportunity for those who would like that additional practice. Workshop Skill Level: All
